The origin of the armorial bearings of the city, are assigned to the first foundation by the King. They consist of the following—Argent, a tree growing out of a mountain base, surmounted by a bird in chief, all proper a salmon with an amulet in its mouth, Or, on the dexter side, a bell pendant to the tree on the sinister. Descending, however, the monkish fables respecting the origin of each separate part of this cognizance, we may conclude, with little danger of mistake, that the tree and the bell referred to the ancient forest which surrounded the Cathedral—the bell to the Cathedral itself—the ring to the Episcopal office—and the fish to the early treasure prized by the beautiful river below, of the foot of the renowned metropolitan. The motto is "Let Glasgow Flourish," to which a former line was added, "through the presiding of the wood." Peter in the Reformation, the salt, indeed, appeared on the sinister side of the shield, which hid two salmon for supporters. Saint Menno was succeeded Shows Latin Verse highlighted (for J. B. 1680).

The Bait of a Fish is the Sea,
The Tree which supports the Sky is the Tree,
The Bell which never rings is the Bell,
O' Gaelic! the group will bring to thee!
